

Kristiansund

The City of Kristiansund

The city Kristiansund
 Kristiansund consist of 4 main islands: Kirkelandet, Gomalandet, Nordlandet and Inndlandet. The harbour is widely known, and makes a natural center of the city. The city is small, but well regulated, modern and open, and have a population of approximately 17000. Main businesses in the region is fish, shipyards, oil industry and trading.

The development of Kristiansund
 The first Stone Age culture in Norway, the Fosna culture settled here over 10 000 years ago. Fish was the main income source until modern times. Kristiansund got status as a city in 1742 when timber was the main trade, but it was the clipfish production a few years later made Kristiansund to one of the leading ports in Norway. The town was rather badly bombarded during word war II. After the rebuilding, Kristiansund appears to be a new and modern city. Today the oil industry has given the city a new growth, and major modernising and development are done.
